

“‘Aging airplanes’ means airplanes that are facing negative impacts from certain physical characteristics such as corrosion, fatigue, deteriorating wiring, possibly the consequences of repairs, and other kinds of things regardless of chronological age.” —Kim Smith, manager, FAA Small Airplane Directorate (FAA Aging Aircraft conference, March 2006)